

What is fast charging for outdoor power supply

What is a fast charging standard?

This fast charging standard provides high charging speeds with 100W+ charging power. This is due to the new Dual Charge technology. Smartphones and devices can be charged up to 10 degrees Celsius cooler and up to four times faster. They charge up to 70% more efficiently than with previous solutions.

How much power does a fast charging device use?

The majority of fast charging standards typically change the voltage rather than boost the amperage to increase the amount of potential energy. Standard USB 3.0 ports output at a level of 5V/1A for smaller devices like wearables. Most phones and other devices are capable of handling at least 5V/2.4A.

What is fast charging & how does it work?

At the most basic level, fast charging is simply increasing the number of watts (W) that are delivered to a phone's battery. A basic USB port sends 2.5W to the connected device, and faster chargers raise this amount. Current-generation devices typically have 15W power bricks right out of the box.

Do I need a fast charger?

You need both for fast charging. Think of voltage (V) as the water pressure and current (A) as the size of the tap. If you want more water faster, you need to increase water pressure and/or increase the size of the tap. Our fast chargers do both but then for electricity. Usually people call it fast charging when the speed is 50 kW or more.

What is the difference between a standard charger and a fast charger?

Standard charging typically operates at 5V (volts) and 1A (amp), which equates to 5W of power. Fast chargers, however, increase either the voltage, the current, or both to increase the power delivered to the device. For example: A 9V/2A charger delivers 18W of power. A 20V/5A charger delivers 100W of power.

Are fast charging devices safe?

The good news is that fast charging technologies have been designed with safety in mind. Modern fast chargers include a variety of safety features such as overcharge protection, temperature control, and automatic power adjustment based on the device's battery level.
